Anti-Bias Education:
Fulfilling the Vision of All Children Feeling Belonging and Significance
Prepared by Soobin Oh
October 22, 2019 - 12:30-2:00PM Mt Hood A
We would like to acknowledge the land upon which the 2019 COSA Early Learning Conference is being held.

The Portland Metro area rests on traditional sites of the Multnomah, Wasco, Cowlitz, Kathlamet, Clackamas, Bands of Chinook, Tualatin, Kalapuya, Molalla, and many other tribes who made their homes along the Columbia River. They have lived on this land since time immemorial.

We honor their existence and their ancestors and wish for their success in adapting to waves of newcomers to this land.

We do not yet live in a world...

...where all children have equal opportunity to become all that they are
Three Manifestations of Bias

Institutional Bias
Tendency of institutions to advantage and favor certain groups of people while other groups are disadvantaged or devalued.

Examples: housing discrimination, wealth inequality, shooting fatalities, educational outcomes

Explicit Bias
Attitudes and beliefs of individuals about other people or groups of people on a conscious level.

A conscious choice.

Ex: hate crimes, racial slurs

Implicit Bias
Attitudes and beliefs of individuals about other people or groups of people on an unconscious level

Pervasive, belongs in all of us

Examples: Speaking slowly to someone with an accent, “mansplaining”

“Planned Curriculum”
“Hidden Curriculum”
Children are grappling with understanding the world whether we are intentionally addressing issues of bias or not.
Discussion

Turn to a partner. Think of your life as a student.

What did you learn about yourself, about others, and about the world that was not covered in the curriculum.

Remember our norms.

Example:

- How politics works/didn’t work for you.
- Talking about race is uncomfortable and should be avoided.
- Stories and songs that are considered “classics.”

Anti-Bias Education Framework

The second best-selling book by the NAEYC.

“The heart of anti-bias work is a vision of a world in which all children are able to blossom, and each child’s particular abilities and gifts are able to flourish.”

The goal is inclusion.
Anti-Bias Education has been studied and practiced for decades: It is a movement.

Children’s Literature

How can we progress anti-bias goals with children’s literature?

Strategies:

“Critical” readings with children

Analyzing and selecting books

Building a School Library
Building awareness of institutional and implicit bias in children’s literature
My name is Skippito Friskito.
(clap-clap)
I fear not a single bandito.
(clap-clap)
My manners are mellow,
I’m sweet like the Jell-O,
I get the job done, yes indeed-o.

-- Skippyjon Jones
I'll hunt in the mountains of Zomba-ma-Tunt
With helpers who all wear their eyes at a slant.
And capture a fine fluffy bird called the Bustard
Who only eats custard with sauce made of mustard.
And, also, a very fine beast called the Hustrard
Who only eats mustard with sauce made of custard.

I'll capture them fat and I'll capture them scrawny.
I'll capture a scraggle-foot Mulligatawny,
A high-stepping animal fast as the wind
From the blistering sands of the Desert of Zind.
This beast is the beast that the brave chieftains ride
When they want to go fast to find some place to hide.
A Mulligatawny is fine for my zoo
And so is a chieftain. I'll bring one back, too.

Why representation matters, an example:

“I grew up in the rural Midwest, and very little that I read, saw, or heard in my classes or in the media represented my reality. There were no buses, subways, or malls where I lived. We were country kids, but not Little House on the Prairie country kids. The women that I saw in the media and read about were either urban or suburban, except for those rural women who always rode horses everywhere and lived on farms. I lived in an apartment and had never even been near a horse. My textbooks, the films I watched in class, and even the tests that we took used examples drawn from a totally different set of life experiences. No one "out there" looked or sounded anything like what I saw "back here." The subtle message I received was that the place where I lived didn't matter, and that my experience didn't matter.”

“Young children need caring adults to help them construct a positive sense of self and a respectful understanding of others. They need adults to help them begin to navigate and resist the harmful impact of prejudice and discrimination. A person’s early childhood years lay the foundation for a developmental and experiential journey that continues into adulthood. With appropriate adult guidance, this foundation will be a strong one, providing the base for the next stages of healthy development and the skills a person needs to thrive and succeed in a complex, diverse world.”

-Louise Derman Sparks and Julie Olsen Edwards
Confronting Stereotypes in Books

Pausing to ask critical questions:

“Do all Latinx people talk this way?”

“Is there anything a boy can do that a girl can’t do? Why do you think that?”

“Do all people live in houses like these?”

- Questions are open-ended
- Children will have uncomfortable theories and responses

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Look for “tokenism” in illustrations</td>
<td>Look for books about children and adults engaging in actions for change</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Look for invisibility across all your books</td>
<td>Consider the author’s or illustrator’s background &amp; perspective</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Check for the relationships between people</td>
<td>Watch for loaded words</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Check the story line</td>
<td>Look for hidden messages about different lifestyles</td>

Celebrating Holidays

Strategies:
Avoid the “Tourist Curriculum”
Holiday (or better yet, cultural) studies and projects
Avoid the “Tourist Curriculum”
The pitfall of the Tourist Curriculum

Is that we only think about or celebrate multiculturalism outside of the formal or “normal” curriculum.

Diversity is treated as exotic - different.

There is an inevitable return back to the “normal” curriculum.
“Tourist” Curriculum and Commercialism
Study and immersion is a deeper and less exploitative approach than “tourist” curriculum

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Study and immersion</th>
<th>“Tourist” approach</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Difference and diversity is seen as a kind of “cultural wealth” or a “fund of knowledge.”</td>
<td>Anything outside the dominant social identity is treated as exotic and outside the norm.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anti-bias is interwoven and integrated into classroom life rather than treated as “diversity time.”</td>
<td>Celebration or acknowledgement is treated as a pause or break from “real work.”</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Easiest to address in thematic or project-based structure.
Can I celebrate holidays at all?

Yes!

And holidays can be sources for building your curriculum, too.

Privilege

Unearned access to resources (social power) that are only readily available to some people because of their social group membership; an advantage or immunity granted to or enjoyed by one societal group above and beyond the common advantage of all other groups.

Privilege is often invisible to those who have it.
