Now that the school year is winding down, we recognize that your focus is on preventing the summer slide and maintaining the literacy skills your students have worked so hard to build. Whether you’ll soon be implementing formal summer school programming, or if your focus is on encouraging at-home reading over summer break, Scholastic is ready to partner with you to provide the tools that will help combat summer learning loss throughout your district.

The following pages describe two of our most popular summer solutions:
LitCamp and My Books Summer Take-Home Packs.

LitCamp

For when they're in school

Created by Pam Allyn, this NEW summer literacy program combines research-based reading and writing lessons with an interactive summer camp approach. LitCamp blends best-selling fiction and nonfiction books with engaging group activities and standards-based literacy lessons to boost key reading and writing skills, and help children reach their full potential. Kids who participate in LitCamp don't have to go to summer school, they get to go to summer camp!

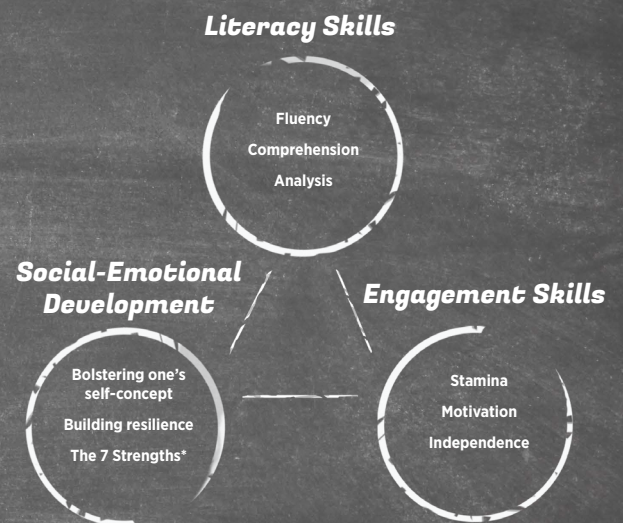

LitCamp K-6 individual sets (Red, Orange, Turquoise, Green, Blue, and Purple Bunks) include:

- 150-160 books • 10-20 grade-specific trade paperbacks (8-15 copies each).
- 15 LitCamp Student Portfolio Folders.
- 15 LitCamp Wristbands with LitCamp logo.
- Grade-specific LitCamp Reader's Guide with instructional support and assessment tools.
- Professional book Every Child a Super Reader (Scholastic 2016) by Pam Allyn and Dr. Ernest Morrell.
- Extension packs available for classes larger than 15 students.

The LitCamp Model

LitCamp integrates all the key ways children learn to read, write, speak, and listen to reverse the summer slide by employing a signature set of lessons that inspire engagement and motivation.

The 7 Strengths: Children learn best in supportive and positive learning environments. LitCamp lessons are framed around seven key strengths that help children grow resilient and powerful as readers, writers, and learners. The 7 Strengths are Belonging, Friendship, Kindness, Curiosity, Confidence, Courage, and Hope.

Educators must support students' literacy growth not only through formal summer school programs, but also by providing families with easy ways to expose their children to books and other opportunities to build their literacy skills.

- Parent involvement in children's literacy activities, as well as having books in the home, has a positive impact on children's reading achievement later on in school. (PIRLS; Mullis & Martin, 2007)
- In addition, children who receive and read books over the summer experience the equivalent of attending three years of summer school. (Allington & McGill-Franzen, 2008)
