

Earthquake Design Challenge

Earthquakes are one of the most destructive natural phenomena on Earth. To lessen the amount of damage caused by earthquakes, engineers design and build different types of structures to withstand the effects of earthquakes. In this activity, you will investigate different types of earthquake-resistant structures. After your investigation, you and your construction team will build a structure and test its resistance to damage from a simulated earthquake.